

Newberg's Debt Reduction Plan

Guest Speaker: Will Worthey, City Manager, City of Newberg

In recent years costs on materials and services have exploded, especially for capital projects. As a result, Newberg's much-discussed new water plant project has been delayed for many years. The estimates for a no-frills new ground water plant design model have increased from $13 million to $21.7 million to $26 million in the course of a handful of years. Learn about the inflation problems the city is grappling with and about its long-range plans to solve them via the mechanism of debt reduction.
